

Copyright & Plagiarism Presentation

The Internet and other electronic resources are traditional means for students to access information. Due to their seemingly free availability and easy access, these resources are easily and frequently plagiarized. As providers and promoters of electronic resources, school and public librarians have a responsibility to teach young users how to use them responsibly for school and personal needs.

With a partner, you will choose either public or school library (define audience by exact age or grade) and give a 15 minute presentation showing how you would teach your users about copyright and plagiarism in the electronic environment. Don't forget that your audience should be children or young adults (ages 5-18 or grades K-12).

You and your partner will be graded on the appropriateness of the format and content of the presentation for your stated audience for the given topic (copyright and plagiarism in the electronic environment) and the effectiveness of the content in teaching the audience about the topic. You will each receive the same grade. Turn in materials to your instructor after your presentation.
